'No investigation going on': Police

Dentistry scandal.

Force researching Dal students' comments to determine if criminal charges could be laid

Police in Halifax are reviewing misogynistic comments about female dentistry students at Dalhousie University allegedly made by their male classmates to determine if a criminal investigation is warranted, the force said Wednesday.

Const. Pierre Bourdages confirmed that the university provided them with copies of the comments made on a deactivated Facebook page.

But he did not know how much information was given to police or the nature of it. It also wasn't clear how long the review would take.

"There is no investigation going on right now," he said. "We have no complaint or evidence of criminal wrongdoing ... We're now reviewing it."

In an email Wednesday, Dalhousie spokesman Brian Leadbetter said the school has "shared the requested information" but offered no other details.

The development came after Bourdages said Tuesday that Dalhousie had initially refused the request to provide the postings based on student privacy concerns, but then indicated it would co-operate.

Police said they would be interested in talking to women who were featured on the Facebook page and feel that they were affected by the posts.

"If any of these alleged victims believe they've been victimized criminally, we would like to speak with them and see what they have to say," Bourdages said, adding that no one has filed a formal complaint about the posts.

Reports of the offensive posts and the university's initial response prompted rallies and calls for the expulsion of the 13 students.

The Facebook page at the centre of the controversy has been taken down.

But according to the CBC, members of the Class of DDS Gentlemen page on Facebook voted on which woman they'd like to have "hate" sex with and joked about using chloroform on women. The CBC said in another post, a woman is shown in a bikini with a caption that says, "Bang until stress is relieved or unconscious (girl)."

Rising salary costs putting big pinch on HRM budget

Money woes. Every new employee must be viewed as potential 25-year, $1.25-million investment: CAO

RUTH DAVENPORT
ruth.davenport@metronews.ca

Halifax's top bureaucrat says salaries and compensation are steadily eating up more and more of the city's budgets, making it essential to be efficient not through belt-tightening, but by finding more "innovative and co-operative" ways of delivering services.

"Doing what we did yesterday tomorrow is a fool's paradise," Chief Administrative Officer Richard Butts told regional council's committee of the whole Wednesday.

Butts presented an overview of the 2015-16 budget for his office, which includes just over $16 million in expenditures, for a net budget of $13.3 million.

He said that's an increase of

HRM CAO Richard Butts

0.3 per cent from 2014-15, and noted that just 13 per cent of gross expenditures are discretionary and subject to finding efficiencies.

"You're sourcing reductions for a total budget from a smaller and smaller number of available dollars, and I think this will be a recurring theme as we go through this," he said.

Council approved the budget, but several councillors raised questions about vacancy management, the practice of not immediately filling vacant positions, that Butts said the municipality uses "aggressively" to manage costs.

"I'm concerned about overtime and burnout of our staff and personnel," said Coun. Hendsbee. "I think some of them are overworked and I'm wondering what kind of productivity we're going to get out of them."

Butts said the municipality's vacancy rate hovers consistently around four per cent, and said anyone suggesting there are too many vacancies is "misinformed."

He said the municipality must consider every new hire as a potential 25-year, $1.25-million investment — and consider whether those resources might be better used elsewhere.

Although HRM is not adding any full-time equivalent positions in the next year, Butts said, salaries remain a major cost driver in the budget, adding that business units must find efficiencies without merely "cutting."

"We're going to have to find ways to deliver service — different ways, more effective ways, more co-operatively, more innovatively, to meet the challenges of the future," he said.

Councillors seek review of ad, promo budgets

Halifax regional councillors have asked for a staff report reviewing the budgets for their advertising, promotion and discretionary needs.

Deputy mayor Lorelei Nicoll tabled the motion during Wednesday's meeting, initially seeking a review of advertising and promotion budgets only, and focused on the possibility of increasing the dollar amounts.

"We have been with a zero balance now, some of us, for a couple of months now," she said. "So just look at an assessment to see the efficiencies, where the money is going and where the money could be allocated."

During the ensuing discussion, councillors asked that the review also cover discretionary funds, and address the rules governing how each fund could be used.

"I'm satisfied with the amount of funds I have ...

it's more flexibility to use some of the funds from different sources to accomplish what needs to be done," said Coun. Whitman.

Nicoll amended the motion to remove a reference to a possible increase in the dollar figure.

Province says sorry to breastfeeding vendor

Tanessa Holt. Despite apology, Dartmouth woman still unsure if she will return to farmers' market

STEPHANIE TAYLOR
stephanie.taylor@metronews.ca

The director of the provincial food protection division believes a Dartmouth woman who was told by a food inspector that she was prohibited from breastfeeding her son and handling food deserved an apology.

Barry MacGregor explained the Department of Agriculture has no issue with breastfeeding whatsoever, but they realized that appeared unclear to vendor Tanessa Holt, who was planning to quit her farmers' market business over what MacGregor called an unfortunate misunderstanding.

"This one kind of got away on us," MacGregor said of the situation on Wednesday.

He phoned Holt on Wednesday morning, apologizing for any confusion after she had been contacted by a food inspector two days prior, informing her that she was not allowed to breastfeed her 7-1/2-month-old son and then serve food.

In an email provided by Holt, food specialist Tracey MacDonald wrote that possible contamination could occur through vomit or feces from the baby.

"The email did start out by saying it's not a breastfeeding issue ... but it wasn't clear what our intent was, and that being more of a hand-hygiene issue," MacGregor explained Wednesday.

He then clarified this in a follow-up email to Holt, outlining as long she properly washes her hands after nursing, there is no problem.

"I'm happy to hear the department doesn't see breastfeeding as a contamination issue," Holt said Wednesday.

She is glad the department "owned up" to its mistake, but feels "irritated that it had to come to this."

But even despite the apology and invitation to continue selling at the market, she is "on the fence" about whether she will return with her business.

Since the whole situation arose from someone inquiring with organizers at the Halifax Seaport Market around the issues of breast-feeding and food-handling, Holt is now worried that others in the public may share similar concerns.

Tanessa Holt, owner of Food Noise, at her Dartmouth home this week. JEFF HARPER/METRO

As a new business owner, Holt said she can't risk losing potential customers who may question the quality of her products, so she needs more time to consider her options before making any return.

Analysis

Low-risk product

Barry MacGregor explained on Wednesday that since the food Tanessa Holt sells comes pre-packaged, it poses a very low risk for any possible contamination compared to food that is prepared fresh.

In fact, he said, there is more of a concern over people who fail to wash their hands after using the washroom, than breastfeeding,

"Ms. Holt is very educated and aware and I have no doubt that she will practise the appropriate hand hygiene," MacGregor said.

Vote for the name of another new ferry

The city and Halifax Transit are once again asking residents to choose a name for a new harbour ferry, expected to set sail this summer.

After more than 500 names were submitted by residents last fall, people will have a chance to cast their ballots for one of six possible names shortlisted in an online survey until Jan. 30.

Voters can choose whether they would like to see the new vessel named in honour of six well-known Haligonians. They are:

— Craig Blake, the first Canadian sailor to be killed in the Afghanistan war.

— Vincent Coleman, the hero who sacrificed his own life to warn thousands of people to flee from the Halifax Explosion.

— Walter Fitzgerald, a long-time educator and former mayor of Halifax.

Online

How do you vote? Go to halifax.ca/surveys/#\_blank.

— Ruth Goldbloom, who co-founded the Pier 21 Society that established the Pier 21 immigration museum.

— Maxine Tynes, an African Nova Scotian writer who has written about the discrimination faced by residents of Africville.

— Raymond Taavel, a respected LGBTQ activist and former chairman of Halifax Pride. He was murdered in 2012.

The name receiving the most votes will be subject to final approval by Transport Canada. The resident who submitted the winning name will receive a free one-year transport pass, courtesy of the city and Halifax Transit.

The new vessel is the second of three ferries that will be replacing the harbour's older fleet.

Last year, residents voted in favour of naming the first of the new ferries Christopher Stannix, in honour of the young soldier from Cole Harbour who was killed in 2007 while serving with the Canadian Armed Forces in Afghanistan.

Inquiry board rules salon owner sexually harassed gay employee

Ordered to pay $11,400. Stephanie Graham filed complaint in what board chair called 'abhorrent actions' of former boss

HALEY RYAN
haley.ryan@metronews.ca

Seven years after Stephanie Graham filed a human rights complaint alleging her former boss sexually harassed and discriminated against her based on sexual orientation, a board of inquiry has ordered him to pay her more than $11,000.

Graham first filed a complaint with the Nova Scotia Human Rights Commission against the owner of Shear Logic Hairstyling, Sean Cormier, in November 2007. She worked at the now-closed Fenwick Street location for three months in an apprenticeship for her cosmetology course.

According to the decision made by board chairman Kenneth Crawford on Dec. 15 and released Wednesday, Graham presented evidence that she felt uncomfortable when Cormier made comments about her appearance and inappropriate remarks about being gay, such as saying a man could "still dream," referring to her as a "crazy bipolar lesbian" and introducing her to clients as a lesbian.

Cormier also called her in the evening multiple times, asked her to dinner and parked outside her home, Graham said, and eventually fired her when he yelled at her in her apartment soon after she declined to meet him for dinner.

In his decision, Crawford

"It was patently obvious Mr. Cormier wished to commence an intimate relationship with Ms. Graham shortly after her employment. One does not have to be perspicacious to discern that his infatuation soon became an obsession."

Nova Scotia Human Rights Commission board chair Kenneth Crawford, in a written release wrote that although Cormier denied every allegation, "I did not believe him at all," and accepted Graham's evidence despite conflicting reports.

"It greatly dismays me to think how the respondent could have treated a young lady, who was 22 years of age at the time, with such anger, total disrespect and humiliation," Crawford said in the decision.

Cormier's "abhorrent actions" occurred with more regularity one month after Graham said she was gay, Crawford said.

Crawford ruled Cormier had discriminated against Graham on account of her gender and sexual orientation, and sexually harassed her while she was employed with him.

Cormier was then ordered to pay Graham $11,400, representing general damages for denigration of her dignity and self-respect and the psychological and emotional harm he inflicted.

60,000 visit new Halifax library

The crowd inside Halifax Public Library on its opening day.
BRAEDON CLARK/FOR METRO

It was a number higher than anyone at Halifax Public Libraries could have dreamed.

New statistics collected by staff reveal that in the first two opening weeks, the Halifax Central Library saw 60,000 people walk through its doors.

"We knew it'd be a lot, but we didn't realize it'd be that much," library spokeswoman Kasia Morrison said Wednesday.

"It's amazing."

There's no clear reason why so many Haligonians flocked to the new library,

By the numbers

900,000

The number of visitors the library is predicting to see by the end of 2015

but Morrison estimates it has something to do with how involved people felt from the start.

"It was a community project from the beginning," she said, citing that an average of 300 residents turned out to the five consolation sessions to weigh in on the design of the new library.

"So many people walked by that building every day and saw the progression. Even if they weren't a part of designing it, they were part of watching it come into being and so curiosity was there," Morrison explained.

It also helped that last January, CNN named the new library as one of the top eye-popping buildings to watch for in 2014, she added.

Overnight parking ban. Nearly 900 tickets issued

The overnight winter parking ban was enforced for the second time this winter early Wednesday and it saw close to 900 people awoken to find tickets on their windshields.

The city says its parking enforcement team issued 347 tickets, while Halifax Regional Police handed out 535. That adds up to a grand total of 882 tickets handed out.

The first parking ban of 2015 was in effect Jan. 5 and resulted in 335 tickets.

"It's not uncommon to see a few hundred tickets this time of year," says city spokeswoman Jennifer Stairs in regard to the number of tickets issued by its parking enforcement unit.

When put into effect by the city, the parking ban runs from 1 a.m. until 6 a.m. and prohibits parking on any streets.

HRM issues public service announcements and posts information on their website to notify the public of a parking ban. The overnight winter parking ban is in effect until March 31. SYDNEY JONES/FOR METRO

For a musician, there's nothing like being on the road with your friends.

Especially when your friends are artists you used to be in competition with, local musician Carleton Stone said of Dylan Guthro and Breagh MacKinnon.

"There's a lot of singer-songwriters, especially in this community. We were kind of doing our own thing but also competing against each other," said Stone, sipping beers with Guthro and MacKinnon in the back room of the Carleton Music Bar and Grill in Halifax.

"We just thought, there's such a great chemistry between us, why not try to join forces and do something that's bigger than any of us could do on our own?"

Quoted

"The music, in my opinion, is stronger than what I do by myself. I'm excited for what we're going to accomplish together."

Singer-songwriter Dylan Guthro

Stone, Guthro and MacKinnon are putting their solo careers on the back-burner and forming the band Port Cities.

Although all three have found success on their own, it wasn't a hard decision to leave that behind, said the 23-year-old Guthro. All three have played in each others' bands, they've written songs together and they are long-time friends.

"We were on stage singing Carleton's Blood Is Thicker Than Water, and the three-part harmony blend felt really natural and really cool, and that kind of sparked the idea," said Guthro, a jack-of-all-trades artist who plays a number of instruments and crosses multiple genres.

Guthro's song Do It All Again was produced by Classified and last summer, he teamed up with local rapper Quake Matthews for the infectious Summertime Win.

Mackinnon, 24, described the band's sound as "rootsy pop," drawing inspiration from Crosby Stills and Nash and Fleetwood Mac.

"The show is sort of a mix of our three sounds, but coming together with these songs that we all wrote together so there's that common thread," said

Carleton Stone, Breagh MacKinnon, Dylan Guthro pose for a photo at the Carleton earlier this week. EFF HARPER/METRO

Mackinnon, whose has earned Music Nova Scotia and East Coast Music Awards nominations for her music.

Stone, 29, said he plays mostly acoustic guitar, while MacKinnon plays keyboards. Guthro, meanwhile, can often be seen switching instruments during live shows.

But all three will share the role of singer, often blending their voices for two- and three-part harmonies.

"It's nice to have two of your best buds to share the weight of being on the road with, because there's so many not-so-cool things about being a travelling musician," said Stone, an award-winning musician whose song Climbing Up The Walls has been a mainstay on local radio airwaves.

Analysis

Nashville-bound

The band has been recording in Cape Breton with the group's mentor and producer, Gordie Sampson. Later this year, they'll head to Nashville for more recording, with the hopes of releasing a single this spring.

"I feel like (Sampson) is capturing the three characters that we bring to the table and making it one thing — Port Cities," said Dylan Guthro.

Two more charged in armed robbery

Police in Halifax have charged two more people in relation to an armed robbery that happened last weekend in Dartmouth.

The robbery took place on Pinecrest Drive Jan. 10 when police say a man approached a 34-year-old woman and a 31-year-old man, produced a firearm and demanded cash from the woman and threatened her life.

Douglas Saulnier, 38, was arrested and charged on Tuesday in relation to the robbery, which police now say involved more than one person.

Michael Saulnier, 22, and 23-year-old Telicia Boutilier were arrested at a traffic stop on Wyse Road on Tuesday evening and held in custody overnight.

Saulnier appeared in Dartmouth provincial court on Wednesday to face several charges in relation to the Jan. 10 incident, including charges of robbery, uttering threats, and possession of a weapon for dangerous purpose.

Boutilier also appeared in court Wednesday to face charges including possession of a weapon for dangerous purpose and unauthorized possession of a firearm.

Public's help sought in locating missing man

Police in Halifax are asking for the public's help locating a missing Dartmouth man who hasn't been heard from since the weekend.

Alexander Cole, 37, was last seen leaving his residence on Windmill Road on Saturday, Jan. 10 at 2 p.m. to go to the Young Street Superstore.

Police say Cole didn't return from his shopping trip and hasn't been heard from since.

He's described as white, five-foot-eight and 180 pounds. He has brown hair, blue eyes, a beard and was last seen wearing blue jeans, a black coat and blue ball cap.

Police don't believe Cole has met with foul play, but they are concerned for his

NDP questions appointment of former Ontario cabinet minister

Laurel Broten.

Opposition wants to know if she has skills to run N.S. business development agency

The leader of Nova Scotia's opposition New Democrats is raising questions about the qualifications and political ties of a former Ontario cabinet minister appointed Wednesday as president and CEO of Nova Scotia's key business development agency.

Maureen MacDonald said she hasn't seen Laurel Broten's resumé, but it's legitimate to ask about her political connections.

"Over the past decade, Ms. Broten held several portfolios in Dalton McGuinty's Liberal government (in Ontario), but economic development was never one of them," MacDonald said in a statement released after Broten's new job at Nova Scotia Business Inc. was announced.

"Nova Scotians need to be assured that the person just selected to manage economic investments on behalf of the province was hired due to her professional qualifications and not her political affiliations."

MacDonald went further in an interview, suggesting little is known about Broten's credentials.

"We know what her political experience is, but what is her experience with respect to working in the private sector doing economic development and attracting investment?"

Broten stressed she was hired not by politicians, but through the approval of a board led by private-sector members.

"My political past had nothing to do with the decisions that they made," she said in an interview, adding her resumé is replete with business experience.

"I bring 20-plus years of experience from both the private and public sector. I practised commercial litigation on Bay Street, I dealt with companies going through exciting mergers and acquisitions. I worked with companies that were having some struggles ... I was elected into government and had a breadth of portfolios."

She also pointed out she served as the Ontario government's vice-chairwoman of the Treasury Board, which "looked at decisions on investing in economic development opportunities."

Nova Scotia Business Inc. issued a statement Wednesday saying Broten has experience in economic development, budgetary analysis, micro-finance and job creation in the creative industries, food processing, green energy and clean-tech sectors.

As well, Broten said, she has a good understanding of Nova Scotia's economy given the fact that she recently wrapped up a study that included a broad review of the province's tax system.

Her report released in November said Nova Scotia should introduce a carbon tax like British Columbia and broaden its harmonized sales tax to cover previously exempt items including children's clothing, diapers and home energy costs.

Broten's report also said those proposed tax increases should be offset by lower income and corporate tax rates and a government spending freeze.

Nova Scotia's Liberal government has yet to say what it will do with the report.

Former N.S. cop saves toddler from burning home

Sgt. Derek King of the RCMP, a former New Minas resident. CONTRIBUTED

A former New Minas man is being called a hero for rescuing a toddler and her grandmother from a house fire in Surrey, B.C. last week.

RCMP dog handler Sgt. Derek King was recently assigned to the detachment in Surrey. On Jan. 8, he was taking a walk through his new neighbourhood when he heard a fire alarm coming from a nearby house.

"I looked over and I could see smoke billowing from the place," said King.

He dialed 911 on his cellphone as he ran towards the coach-house-style home (two separate homes that share a roof). Banging first on one door and then on the second as he tried to ensure no one was inside, he heard someone trying to get the door open.

"The lady was struggling to get the latch undone," he said.

The woman, who used an oxygen tank for a pre-existing breathing condition, told King her granddaughter was still inside. The little girl had become separated from her grandmother in the smoke.

The house was filled with thick, black smoke and King couldn't see anything inside. He told the woman to hold onto the door frame and rushed inside to find the child.

"I couldn't see anything because of the black smoke. I didn't have to go far, thankfully."

King got two-year-old Avery outside just as firefighters arrived.

Paramedics attended to both King and the little girl and both were breathing well. Avery's grandmother, due to her medical condition, needed a little more help.

Some of King's RCMP colleagues who responded to the fire recognized him and the story of his actions began to circulate around the Surrey area.

"I'm glad I was in the right place at the right time, and I'm glad everything worked out — the main thing is that the little girl and her grandmother are OK," said King, who has a young daughter close to Avery's age.

Myles Goodwyn of April Wine fame launches shoe initiative in Halifax

Hundreds of clients at shelters across Halifax will have warmer toes this winter thanks to local donations and the help of a Canadian rocker.

On Wednesday, April Wine frontman Myles Goodwyn stopped in to the Value Village in Bayers Lake for the launch of his Soleful Caring: Shoes for the Homeless campaign, where dozens of boxes of shoes were handed over to Shelter Nova Scotia.

"It went fantastic," said the acting executive director of Shelter N.S., Melissa Phillips.

ciation, began in late December, about 700 pairs of new and gently used shoes have been dropped off at the Value Village location.

Goodwyn wanted to begin his campaign in Halifax, where he once lived and where April Wine began, Phillips said, and they were excited to have a big name bring some awareness to homelessness in the city.

He is hoping to bring the campaign to other Maritime cities, then right across the country, Phillips said.

appropriate footwear or holes in their shoes," she said.

"When the weather's cold and wet it's great when people have access to boots to keep their feet dry."

Most of the shoes will be going to the Metro Turning Point men's shelter, Phillips said, but there were a few women's pairs donated that could go to the Barry House women's facility.

The campaign is ongoing until Feb. 14, and donations of shoes and new socks are welcomed at Value Village.

"We're really happy with the outcome.... It's been excellent results," Phillips said. "I would say that we're really pleased at the amount of awareness being raised, and that there are folks that want to come out and help."

P.E.I. fossil sheds light on reptile evolution

A Nova Scotia researcher says a fossil found by a boy on Prince Edward Island more than a decade ago is that of a newly-recognized species of reptile that lived about 300 million years ago.

Sean Modesto, a professor of biology at Cape Breton University, said it's one of the most complete reptile fossils of the Carboniferous era.

"This specimen is really rare," said Modesto, who was the principal investigator of the project. "It's the only specimen we know of from this particular part of the Carboniferous and it's the only reptile from that slice of time."

The research was published in the journal Proceedings of the Royal Society B on Wednesday.

Modesto said the fossil was discovered by a boy and his family on their farmland in Prince County, P.E.I., more than 14 years ago. It was taken to the Royal Ontario Museum in 2004 and about four years ago, Modesto and his team started their research.

The fossil, erpetonyx arsenaultorum, was named after the Arsenault family who made the discovery.

The mysterious fossil THE CANADIAN PRESS

Modesto said the fossil is very well-preserved, with its bones retaining their relative positions to each other.

He said it's the closest and oldest relative ever found of a group of early reptiles called bolosaurid parareptiles.

The discovery indicates that reptiles at the end of the Carboniferous era were more diverse than previously suggested, said Modesto.

He said previous data showed that parareptiles had one ancestor that made it through the end of the Carboniferous era and that they only diversified in the following era, called the early Permian.

But the discovery increases the diversity of reptiles at the end of that era by 80 per cent, he said.

"This one specimen allows us to say, 'Yes, reptiles aren't these very mysterious animals right at the end of the Carboniferous. Here's evidence that they're actually more diverse than the fossil records indicate.'"

Laura Jessome case

Man gets federal prison time for disposing of body

A 51-year-old Glace Bay man who pleaded guilty to helping to dispose of the body of 21-year-old Laura Catherine Jessome in the Mira River in May 2012 was sentenced Wednesday to complete a 3-1/2-year federal sentence.

Robert Edwin Matheson was given credit for the time he's already served having been behind bars since his arrest in December 2012. There now remains about 4-1/2 months left on the sentence, which was imposed Wednesday.

The sentence comes after Matheson pleaded guilty to being an accessory after the fact to murder. Matheson was aware that Thomas Ted Barrett, 39, and Morgan James MacNeil, 23, both of Glace Bay, were involved in the death of Jessome, but still assisted them in escaping prosecution.

Both Barrett and MacNeil are charged with second-degree murder in connection with Jessome's death. Neither has yet to stand trial on the charges.

Java Sea. Singapore navy finds AirAsia fuselage

A Singaporean navy ship has found the crashed AirAsia plane's fuselage, a 30-metre-long section with a wing attached, in the Java Sea, authorities said Wednesday.

Images taken by a remote-controlled vehicle from the ship showed parts of the plane's wing and words on the fuselage, Singapore Defence Minister Ng Eng Hen said on his Facebook page. He said Indonesian search officials have been notified so they can begin recovery operations.

The fuselage section that was found is 30 metres long and 10 metres wide with a height of three metres, Indonesia's National Search and Rescue Agency chief Henry Bambang Soelistyo said.

"The fuselage with a wing still attached on it was found in the priority search area and has been confirmed as part of AirAsia plane," Soelistyo said.

He added it was some

Sex abuse. Model pursues charges against Bill Cosby

A model who claims Bill Cosby drugged and sexually abused her at the Playboy Mansion met with Los Angeles police on Wednesday to pursue criminal charges against the comedian over the 2008 incident.

An attorney for Chloe Goins said after the meeting that his client is the first woman accusing Cosby of sexual misconduct whose case may fall within the statute of limitations. More than 15 women have accused Cosby of sexual misconduct, including several who say the comedian drugged and raped them in incidents dating back at least four decades.

Goins did not speak during a news conference Wednesday. Her attorney, Spencer Kuvin, said she came forward after hearing about other women describing abuse by Cosby and realizing she might have a valid criminal case.

An email to Cosby's attorney, Marty Singer, was not immediately returned.

Kuvin declined to discuss what Goins told detectives but restated her allegations that Cosby drugged her at a 2008 event at the Playboy Mansion. Goins does not know what happened while she was blacked out but awoke to find herself naked and Cosby over her. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

"Congratulations to you, the nation of Islam, for this revenge that has soothed our pain."

Nasr al-Ansi, a top commander of al-Qaida, in a video posted to the group's Twitter account

Yemen's al-Qaida branch on Wednesday confirmed it carried out last week's deadly assault on a French satirical newspaper to avenge cartoons depicting the Prophet Muhammad, as it called for unity among jihadi ranks and vowed more attacks on the West.

In an 11-minute video posted on the group's Twitter account, Nasr al-Ansi, a top commander of al-Qaida in the Arabian Peninsula, said the attack on the office of the Charlie Hebdo weekly — in which two gunmen massacred 12 people — was in "revenge for the prophet." He warned of more "tragedies and terror" in the future, saying "you will look for peace and stability but you will not find it because of the deeds of those carrying out martyrdom operations and heroes of lone jihad."

Al-Ansi said AQAP "chose the target, laid out the plan and financed the operation." He said the radical Yemeni-American cleric Anwar al-Awlaki, who was killed in a U.S. drone strike in Yemen in September 2011, had arranged the attack.

If confirmed, that would mean the Paris attack was years in the making. But Al-Ansi produced no evidence to support his claims, leaving lingering questions over the exact relationship between the attackers and the militant group's leadership in Yemen.

Crackdown

54 arrested for hate speech, glorifying terrorism

France ordered prosecutors around the country to crack down on hate speech, anti-Semitism and glorifying terrorism and announced Wednesday it was sending an aircraft carrier to the Mideast to work more closely with the U.S.-led coalition fighting Islamic State militants.

Authorities said 54 people had been arrested for hate speech and defending terrorism in the last week. The crackdown came as Charlie Hebdo's defiant new issue sold out before dawn around Paris, with scuffles at kiosks over dwindling copies of the satirical weekly that fronted the Prophet Muhammad anew on its cover.

Charlie Hebdo sends 1,500 copies here

The Canadian distributor for the satirical magazine Charlie Hebdo says 1,500 copies of the latest issue — which features a caricature of the Prophet Muhammad on the cover — will be available in different parts of the country Friday.

Louis-Philip Vermeersch, director of sales for LMPI, says that's up from the 100 issues that are usually delivered for distribution each week.

But he says the increased production likely won't be enough to meet demand for the issue from those Canadians who want to see the latest copy of a magazine at the centre of an international tragedy.

Charlie Hebdo is usually available only in Quebec and one store in Toronto, but Vermeersch says distribution will be more widespread this time.

Copies will be sent to 135 stores across the country, the vast majority of which will be in Quebec. Stores will receive an average of 10 copies apiece, Vermeersch said.

Auto lenders using black box to track buyers with poor credit

A little-known black box buried in the guts of many vehicles on Canada's roads makes drivers with poor credit the hapless targets of what is becoming a 24-hour surveillance culture.

Known as a starter interrupter, the GPS-equipped, wallet-sized box is popular with auto-loan companies. If the owner stops making payments, the lender can send a signal to the box, disabling the vehicle by shutting off the starter. The GPS function also allows for tracking the customer's movements.

Thousands of starter interrupters have been on the roads in Canada for years, but little has been said about how they're used and the information lenders can collect. Consumer-protection laws have curtailed their use in Quebec, and serious questions are being raised about their safety in the United States following reports about moving cars being shut down remotely — though one company that makes them denies that's even possible.

TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

NEWSPAPER EDITS OUT WOMEN

Above: World leaders attend a march in solidarity with the Charlie Hebdo attack victims in Paris. Below: Female leaders erased from a similar photo of the rally, by HaMevaser newspaper. ABOVE: GETTY IMAGES; BELOW: SCREENGRAB

The world is watching — and arguably just waiting — for the next head-slapping action to find, screengrab and broadcast to the world

KRISTIN THOMPSON
readers@metronews.ca

It seems you can't get away with much these days because Little Brother is there, taking a screengrab of your perceived offence and retweeting it for the world to turn into a meme.

On the hot seat this week is conservative Jewish newspaper HaMevaser, which removed all of the women from a photograph of world leaders marching in Paris in support of Charlie Hebdo, and printed said photograph on its front page.

Gone from the photo are German Chancellor Angela Merkel, Paris Mayor Anne Hidalgo, EU foreign affairs chief Federica Mogherini and Danish Prime Minister Helle Thorning-Schmidt.

The edits are offensive and head-slapping for the obvious reasons: Removing people from a photograph and presenting the image as fact, in a newspaper, is not journalism. Pains-takingly editing out the women, specifically, suggests a dubious view on the value of women, in my opinion.

What's interesting is the idea that even a little-known newspaper with a relatively small circulation can so quickly catch the attention — and derision — of the entire world.

Five years ago, the Haredi (Ultra-Orthodox) community's practice of not publishing pictures of women for the sake of modesty would likely have gone relatively unnoticed. And yet, when Jewish site Walla outed HaMevaser over the altered Paris photo, it spread like wildfire around the web. As the world shrinks and the spotlight of social media grows, the viewpoints of people and communities — no matter how insular — become exposed for all to see, judge, re-tweet and hashtag.

In this new world of cellphones, Twitter, Facebook and Instagram, the world's eyes are always on us.

Women only

This isn't the first time an ultra-orthodox newspaper has edited women out of photographs. Following the death of Osama Bin Laden, Brooklyn-based ultra-orthodox Jewish newspaper Der Tzitung photoshopped Hillary Clinton and another woman out of the photograph of U.S. President Barack Obama and his security team watching the raid.

- The photo has also inspired several memes, including this one by satirical news site Waterford Whispers News, which edited all the men out of the image.

As a Muslim journalist, I'm not OK with the Charlie cover

ALI ZAFAR
readers@metronews.ca

I'm appalled by the renewed satirizing of Prophet Muhammad in Charlie Hebdo, not only as a Muslim but also as a journalist.

My condemnation stems from the fact that the Prophet is a revered figure in my faith who should not be drawn out — let alone satirized in untoward illustrations — according to widely held Islamic traditions.

But my condemnation goes deeper than that. As a person of faith, and a person of colour, it baffles me that the right to freedom of speech is being used as a right to be racist and bigoted toward Muslims, which is made clear by the obscene cartoons in editions of Charlie.

Muslims are a racialized demographic, with the majority of French Muslims coming from a North African background, while in Canada, the majority of Muslims are of Pakistani, Indian, Arab or Iranian origin.

I've heard the phrase "Muslims aren't a race" many times, but just about every asinine image of Muslims or the Prophet in Charlie depicts them as brown or black individuals.

Working in the media, I understand the responsibility that comes with freedom of speech and how that involves making moral judgments in news coverage on a daily basis. One of the main reasons why I got into this profession is because of its power to be a voice for the minority.

I can't help but feel that publishing the satirical Muhammad cartoons does nothing more than allow a select few to flaunt their privilege to laugh at images that further antagonize an already marginalized group, especially in France.

These cartoons play into people's fears of Muslims and are used to justify increased surveillance on a national scale. They also fuel the rampant Islamophobia that is now raging in France, with at least 60 reported anti-Muslim incidents since the Charlie attack, from firebombs and pig heads thrown into mosques, to veiled women subjected to insults on the street. At the same time, I understand that Islam forbids violently censoring free speech, as the gunman did in the Charlie Hebdo attack.

The Prophet himself faced violence and verbal ridicule from individuals, but never used harsh words or physical force in return. It's his example that I'll continue to follow.

Cooper on laughing with Clint

Book to film.

Eastwood lightened the mood while filming the sombre American Sniper

MATT PRIGGE

Metro World News in New York

Bradley Cooper starts off the press conference for American Sniper very, very seriously. "I try not to look in the mirror too much, quite honestly," he says at one point, not remotely cracking a smile.

Eventually he loosens up, busts out a decent impersonation of the film's director — one Clint Eastwood — and reminisces warmly about that time Eastwood oozed childlike glee watching a kid on set: none other than the real-life daughter of Army sharpshooter Chris Kyle (played by Cooper in the film) and his widow Taya.

"We laughed a tremendous amount on the movie — shockingly, given the content," Cooper says. "You're so excited to come to the set every day, because Clint Eastwood is there." The loose nature is just how Eastwood likes to work. "I think maybe why he gets so many great performances out of people is because he makes them feel really at ease. He's curious. John Huston said towards the end of his life that that's what keeps you going: curiosity. He's just so curious. He's like a little kid."

Cooper's no modest fan of the director's work, citing Unforgiven as "maybe the best American film."

He feels a connection between the best picture winner and American Sniper.

"This character is almost William Munney prior to when we meet him in Unforgiven:

Bradley Cooper plays Chris Kyle in American Sniper. CONTRIBUTED

Chris Kyle with his book. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

his wife has since died and he's taking care of the kids and he comes back because (his friend) has been murdered. We saw a lot of similarities."

There was another incentive to give Eastwood the reins: "Chris Kyle said if there was any way he had a choice of who would direct the movie, it would be Clint Eastwood. And then he had his wish."

They had fun making American Sniper, but the film is absolutely serious.

Not only is it about the damage war does to families and soldiers' psyches, but Kyle himself was murdered by a troubled vet while the film was in pre-production.

They had an extra responsibility to get the story right and impart a useful message. "The takeaway for those who can relate to (Kyle) is that it will be healing," he says.

But even those who aren't veterans themselves can see "what vets go through, what Taya has gone through."

Though Kyle's four tours were during the Iraq War, Cooper doesn't see American Sniper as political. "It's not a movie about the Iraq War. It's a movie about what someone like Chris has to go through as a soldier — the dilemmas, the horror of it," he explains. "That's all we ever talked about. It's not a political movie at all. It's a movie about a man. It's a character study."

Cooper actually trained with live ammo, which both helped and harmed his work. He found the first sniping sequence much too real.

"I'd only felt the gun with live ammo, and I saw two actors in the scope. My stomach turned and I moved the gun away," he recalls. "I said, 'We can't shoot the scene with them there.' I just couldn't do it, even though the gun wasn't loaded. I had a glimpse of what a soldier has to go through."

With Eastwood, Cooper was working for a director famous for doing as few takes as possible, sometimes just one. Cooper found that refreshing.

"Sometimes you do movies, you think, 'Well, I'm warming up on the first three and then we'll get into it on seven and eight. That's not happening on this movie at all. You better bring it the first take,' he says. "It's almost like theatre in a way, doing a Clint Eastwood movie."

It even felt familiar to him, based on his time with Silver Linings Playbook and American Hustle director David O. Russell, who relies heavily on spontaneous, off-the-cuff traits.

"On a David O. Russell movie, when you step out of the van in the morning you better be able to shoot the scene the moment your foot touches the ground," he explains. "I've come to love it, because there's an energy and vitality, a sense that it's actually happening. If I ever have a chance to direct I would always want to do that. Never make them feel like they have 100 takes. Make them feel like this is it. You want to raise the stakes, anyway."

Eastwood's adaptations

American Sniper is based on Chris Kyle's 2012 true story, American Sniper: The Autobiography of the Most Lethal Sniper in U.S. Military History, which sat on the The New York Times Best Seller list for 37 weeks.

This isn't the first book director Clint Eastwood has adapted for the big screen. Here's a look at five of other movies in his lengthy filmography that topped the best-seller list:

1 The Eiger Station: Eastwood starred in and directed this 1972 thriller about a mountaineering art dealer who is also a paid assassin.

2 The Bridges of Madison County: A sensation when it was released in 1992, the book is one of the bestsellers of the 20th century. Eastwood turned it into a 1995 film starring Meryl Streep.

3 Midnight in the Garden of Good and Evil: This 1997 crime drama was on the The New York Times Best Seller list for 216 weeks.

4 Mystic River: Dennis Lehane published his novel about three childhood friends reunited by a murder in 2001. Eastwood turned it into an Academy award-winning film in 2003.

5 Invictus: This 2009 film is based on John Carlin's book, Playing the Enemy: Nelson Mandela and the Game That Made a Nation, about the 1995 Rugby World Cup in South Africa. METRO

Thriller about rail commuters full of twists, turns and shocks

Debut novel. The Girl on the Train's narrator turns passengers into characters, then tries to imagine what their everyday lives are like

Metro World News in New York City

Paula Hawkins' first book, the emotional thriller The Girl On The Train, only came out on Tuesday, but DreamWorks has already bought the movie rights.

With every early review comparing it to Gone Girl, the stakes are pretty high for this novel, about a woman named Rachel who sees the same people on her commute to and from work each day and builds up stories in her mind about them.

An alcoholic, Rachel makes for an unreliable narrator, which in part is responsible for the book's many twists, turns and its shocking ending.

Making 'subway friends'

"When I used to commute for work, one of my favourite things to do was to look out the window and into peoples' houses if I could see in," Hawkins tells us.

"The idea for the book partially comes from the idea that you see these people every day and you feel like you've made a connection, but it's actually imaginary. And then thinking about what a vulnerable, lonely person would do with that sensation."

Hawkins says she liked the idea of creating a narrator with a drinking problem because it creates an unreliability in a lot of ways.

"You can't trust yourself, your memory or your own judgments," she says.

Getting it all on paper

When she sat down to write the book, Hawkins says she first created a detailed chapter-by-chapter outline to keep track of the multiple characters and time jumps, but there were a few things that took her by surprise.

"There's a character, Anna, who changed quite a lot for me," she says.

"I saw her completely differently at the end of the book than I did at the beginning."

On those Gone Girl comparisons

When asked if the constant Gone Girl comparisons are flattering or annoying, Hawkins says it's a double-edged sword.

"It's fantastic because I think Gone Girl is such a great book, but at the same time, I'd like (Girl on the Train) to be seen on its own merits as well."

As for that movie deal, Hawkins says things are still very early and she's just crossing her fingers.

For now, she's content with just getting the book in the hands of commuters, getting them so immersed that they just might miss their stop.

Gone Girl. Author behind hit film hasn't ruled out working on a sequel

Gillian Flynn's says her thriller, Gone Girl, could see an on-screen sequel, but only if her dream team agrees to it.

Flynn would want lead actors Rosamund Pike and Ben Affleck to return, along with director David Fincher, should the story continue.

"There could be a sequel at some point. If everyone is game to get the gang back together, it could be really fun a few years from now," Flynn told the New York Daily News just before this week's release of the film on DVD and Blu-ray.

"We could pick it up and see what those crazy Dunnes are up to a few years down the road and if they got on — not well, I don't think."

"I would have to have the exact same people to do it — I would want Rosamund, Ben and Fincher to do it."

Flynn's 2012 novel was a critical and popular success but was overlooked on prominent awards lists, prompting a discussion over the perceived preference for high-brow literary fiction at book awards.

The 2014 film adaptation went on to make more than $365 million, on a $61-million budget.

It accrued four nominations for the Golden Globe awards — for best actress, director, adapted screenplay and original score.

Although it was shut out at the Golden Globes, it remains in contention for two awards at the British Academy Film Awards on Feb. 8 (for best actress and adapted screenplay), and was considered a front-runner for today's Academy Award nominations. AFF

Giller jury jumps to five members

The prestigious Scotiabank Giller Prize is expanding its jury from three to five members.

Organizers say the 2015 jury will include Canadians Alison Pick, Alexander MacLeod and Cecil Foster, as well as Britain's Helen Oyeyemi and Ireland's John Boyne, who will serve as chairman.

This is the first time in the award's 22-year history that it has appointed a five-member jury.

Executive director Elana Rabinovitch says the larger jury "allows for more and different perspectives and injects new vigour into the quality of the deliberations."

"Bringing more readers into the mix, gifted individuals with varied backgrounds and voices, is bound to bring a different level of discernment to the conversation about the books," she said in a statement.

The Giller prize purse increased last year to $140,000, with $100,000 going to the winner and $10,000 to each finalist.

Miley Cyrus ALL PHOTOS: GETTY IMAGES

What if Miley took her clothes off and everybody yawned?

Oh, Miley. Former Disney star Miley Cyrus just can't stop showing off her goods to anyone who will look. To that end, she's gifted V Magazine with a collection of "candid" Polaroids from her recent world tour to celebrate their music issue, hitting newsstands today. The magazine is even offering a fold-out poster of a fully nude Cyrus emerging from a bubble bath. Enticing, right? Here's the thing, though: We apparently live in a world now where a collection of naked Miley Cyrus pictures is met with a collective yawn instead of the startled gasp I assume she was hoping for. As commenters over at Defamer put it, "It just seems so boring and one-dimensional" and, "I for one appreciate Miley's attempt to desexualize female nudity."

Kristen Stewart really does care

It is a question that has plagued scholars, lo, since the nascent days of Twilight cinematic history: Exactly how many f—s does Kristen Stewart give? Many have argued that her enduring appeal is rooted in her natural inability to not care about anything, but Stewart herself. She renounces such spurious categorization. When renowned culture critic and Salon deputy entertainment editor Anna Silman recently lauded Stewart with, "You are kind of a hero to people, in a way. A lot of people admire what they see as your give-no-f—s attitude," Stewart took extreme exception. "I'm like, 'Actually, no one gives a f— like me,'" Stewart insists. "No one gives more of a f— than me. It's just ironic to me. I'm always like, 'Really?'" So there you have it. The debate is settled.

More bad news for the ladies of The View

Things are not looking good for Rosie, Whoopi and crew, as execs at ABC are said to be "ready to abandon ship" on long-running daytime talk show The View, according to the Mail Online. "The brass at ABC feels like they've tried to do everything possible to breathe new life into this show," a source says. The View, currently in its 18th season, would be replaced by an extra hour of Good Morning America, a move similar to the one the Today show made years ago. "ABC feels it has exhausted their options with

The View and now it's time to expand the existing franchise. They feel that since GMA is already beating NBC's Today during the first two hours of the broadcast, why not extend the morning broadcast?" But what will Whoopi Goldberg do with her mornings now?

The year gets a bit quirkier as Björk readies new album for March

Björk stumbled onto Twitter this week to announce her first album in four years is on its way, and she describes it in the most Björk way possible. The announcement of the album, Vulnicura, came along with a handwritten note describing what we can expect from the Icelandic iconoclast's new tunes. "The songs are called Stonemilker, Lionsong, History of Touches, Black Lake, Family, Notget, Atom Dance, Mouth Mantra and Quicksand," she writes. "I hope you will enjoy it!"

I can already see Mouth Mantra and History of Touches becoming club hits. The new work, her ninth studio album and the first since her experimental Biophilia in 2011, will be released in March.

What's big for the boys in 2015

Menswear trends are slower burning than womenswear, but it's still an exciting time for guy-style. Here's what will reign in the world of men's retail this coming year.

AFF

Matching shades

All white, all beige, neutrals ... this year is going to be about the refined use of colour palettes. On the Spring/Summer 2015 runways, London Burberry sent out lots of bright colours, but grouped them together, while at Calvin Klein Italo Zuchelli created lots of buzz with his hunky models in 'nude' beige tones. Tomas Maier took a similar approach with his neutral colours at Bottega Veneta. Some brands took it further and opted for all-white looks; from toothpaste-white bonded leather jackets at Neil Barrett to off-white tailoring paired with ice-white sportswear at Sergio Corneliani.

Checks and stripes

Patterns arrived on the S/S 2015 runways in classic formulations: windowpane checks, monochrome plaids and pinstripes. Frida Giannini at Gucci described her naval-striped lads as 'decadent admirals' and her fellow Italian Giorgio Armani dressed his deckhands in sun lounge striped red casual jackets. Milanese upstarts MSGM also mixed checked patterns with sportswear. When it came to pinstripes, as usual, it was London that was most on point. Matthew Miller revisited the city's Savile Row heritage with his deconstructed tailoring and Jonathan Anderson riffed on a tongue-in-cheek version business casual by creating apron shapes from the classic gentleman's staple.

A touch of dandyism

With all the minimalism, tailoring and sporty elements going on, you might be forgiven for thinking that menswear is getting a bit boring. Worry not. The rock 'n' roll touches aren't this coming year's biggest trend, but there are splashes of fun to be had. Paul Smith, Dries Van Noten, and Valentino all created stunning silk prints in pants and shirts (often paired with more restrained tailoring) for Spring 2015. Van Noten's use of colour was restrained (he stuck to pale gold, red, burgundy and navy) but his use of Richard Haines' illustrated dancers was more than eye-catching enough.

Vow to find a perfect spot

Destination: Married. Make your wedding day a memorable adventure with friends and family

VAN DEN BROEK
For Metro

For many, exchanging vows on a beach at sunset in a hot climate is the definition of a dream wedding.

According to Wedding Bells magazine's 2014 Trend Report, 15 per cent of Canadian brides are planning on having a destination wedding. The magazine also notes that the total number of destination weddings has more than doubled since 2009.

"Destination weddings used to be a rare occurrence," said Soha Lavin, a wedding planner with Vancouver's Countdown Events Planning & Design. "But now, more and more of our couples are holding destination weddings in the most convenient manner to ensure all of their loved ones can attend."

"We are definitely seeing an increase in these types of weddings," said Tracey Manailescu, co-founder of The Wedding Planners Institute of Canada Inc. (WPIC) "Some of our WPIC alumni have switched to only working with couples having destination weddings."

Where to go?

Mexico, Jamaica, and Dominican Republic are always favourites, Manailescu said.

"They're easy for guests to travel to for larger wedding parties and cost-effective," she said.

However, couples are also becoming more and more interested in Europe.

"Italy, Greece, and Spain are hot because of their stunning views and architecture,

According to Wedding Bells magazine's 2014 Trend Report, 15 per cent of Canadian brides are planning on having a destination wedding. SHUTTERSTOCK memorable adventures, and great food and wines," Manailescu said.

Lavin also said Maui and California have piqued some of her clients' imagination.

How should you pick?

First of all, are there any destinations that have a special meaning to you?

Another major factor in choosing your destination is whether it's easy and affordable to travel to.

"So you need to find out: Do guests need to switch planes and take long shuttle rides to get to the location?" Manailescu said. "If the resort or hotel is expensive, the couple should look for alternative locations for guests to stay and then provide day passes for the wedding festivities."

Also don't forget to consider health and safety concerns — keep up-to-date on travel advisories via the Canadian government. (travel.gc.ca/travelling/advisories)

Finally, if you have selected your resort, do your homework and find out if there is any construction or repairs going on that may hinder wedding-related activities.

Get a little help

Is there too much to think about? Professional wedding planners and agents aren't just helpful, they are knowledgeable, too.

"Consider a licensed travel agent as they will provide guidance and be in the loop with any changes or information affecting travel," Manailescu said. "And a WPIC-certified wedding co-ordinator can help liaise between venue, vendors and keep on things such as marriage licenses, time restrictions, venue co-ordinators and more."

'Bespoke' decor brings upcycled bikes indoors

Bikes have become part of hipster culture. There are bicycle-themed dining, drinking and shopping establishments from Halifax to Vancouver and dozens of bike-friendly burgers in between. While the rides themselves are often tricked out with coloured tires, swanky seats and vintage baskets, there are also those who see more than the sum of two wheels, a frame and a seat. Designers and artists are creating furnishings and art that give bicycles a whole new way to roll

Sexy sprockets

Canadian cyclist and metal artisan Gilbert VandenHeuvel turns out all sorts of reworked bicycle art and accessories from his studio in Goderich, Ont.

"The sexy sprockets, curvy rims, flexible rubber and sturdy frame make for endless design possibilities," he says. Bikes are "almost begging to be reborn, reshaped into something surprising and beautiful." THERECYCLER.CA

Handlebar taxidermy

Designer Hilary Nagler of Santa Barbara, Calif., plays with a similar idea, making "bicycle taxidermy" by mounting handlebar "horns" on a basswood plaque. Ebonizing the handlebars gives them a rustic patina and vintage esthetic. Nagler says the pieces are a "sentimental nod to my beloved childhood Schwinn," while also tipping an artsy hat to Picasso's bull's-head motif.

How to decorate an open-plan space

Designer tips. Give your open-concept home a seamless flow

I recently purchased a two-level small townhouse that has an open layout. I am attempting to decorate the main floor space. Any tricks or hints? — Rob, Halifax

DESIGN CENTRE
Karl Lohnes
home@metronews.ca

Choosing an open concept kitchen/living space is a great option for young families (where parents are in the kitchen and children are in the living space); folks who entertain in a big way (since most parties end up in the kitchen, anyway); or people who want to make a small home feel more spacious.

Here are a few rules to follow if you want each area's decor to flow easily.

Antiqued Oak Iron Springs engineered wide-plank flooring, $10 per square foot, KentwoodFloors.com

Choose one look

Your kitchen's esthetic should be similar to the living space. For example, if you have modern furnishings in the living/dining area, then the kitchen should have cabinetry, counters and finished that mimic that modern feel.

Divide without walls

There should be a visual divider between the living area for entertaining and kitchen area for cooking. A kitchen work island, desk or table with chairs should be used as a barrier to the working area of the kitchen. This helps to visually keep the fun and games in the living area and the working kitchen functioning smoothly and safely.

Sliding barn-style doors are a great way to keep offices and dens open to the rest of the house yet offer privacy when needed.

Being consistent with colour and tones creates visual flow in open concept spaces. Orissa area rug (left), from $600, CrateAndBarrel.com; MSI's Mare Bianco 12x24 inch porcelain tile (above), $4 each, HomeDepot.ca ALL PHOTOS: CONTRIBUTED Flooring should flow from one area to another without jarring the eye with light then dark tones. For example, having medium wood toned flooring in your living space, then a medium brown stone in the foyer, a similar tone of brown in the kitchen tile and a similar colour of broadloom for a den area will create the feeling of one large floor space.

Keep flooring similar

A foyer carpet runner should take its cue for colour and pattern from larger area rugs in other areas throughout the open-concept space.

Match up the details

Window treatments, hardware metal tones and wall colours should also blend from one area to another in an open-concept home. Similar window shade styles and colours should be used throughout the main floor. The metallic colours and styles of doorknobs, cabinet hardware and lighting should all be co-ordinated, and paint colours also need to blend.

By decorating all the areas of your main floor as one large space, you will simplify the decorating process and create visual flow.

A little lemony zip goes a long way

Main or side dish.

This Barley Risotto with Lemon, Leeks and Peas isn't traditional, and that's a good thing

"It may be cheeky to call this a risotto since the traditional version uses rice, but the cooking technique is the same," writes Gwendolyn Richards in Pucker.

"The barley gets just as creamy as it cooks slowly with broth, but still stays a bit chewy for a much heartier dish. I like this with a lot of lemon zip, so I add the full tablespoon of lemon juice. Sprinkle some roughly chopped basil otop just before serving for a bit more green and a herbal hit. This dish is excellent with roasted or pan-seared chicken."

1. In a small saucepan set over medium heat, bring the chicken stock to a low simmer. Keep it barely simmering as you prepare the risotto.

2. In a large saucepan set over medium heat, warm the oil and butter until the butter starts to foam slightly. Add the leeks and salt and sauté, stirring occasionally, until the leeks are softened, 2 to 3 minutes, then add the garlic and cook until it's fragrant, about a minute more. Stir in the pearl barley, mixing it with the leeks and garlic until each grain is coated and shimmering with the oil and butter and is slightly toasted, about 2 to 3 minutes. Pour in the white wine and stir until most of it is absorbed.

3. Begin adding the simmering stock, about half a cup (125 ml) at a time, stirring often and waiting until most of the liquid has been absorbed before adding more. It should take 4 to 5 minutes for the barley to soak up the liquid between additions. If it's taking a lot less time than that, reduce the heat. If it's taking more, turn up the heat.

4. Just after the last bit of stock has been added, stir in the peas. Add the cream, lemon zest, 1/2 a tablespoon (7.5 ml) of lemon juice and the Parmesan, then stir gently until everything is mixed together. Taste for seasonings, and add the rest of the lemon juice if desired. Sprinkle with additional Parmesan just before serving. RECIPES FROM PUCKER: A COOKBOOK FOR CITRUS LOVERS BY GWENDOLYN RICHARDS (WHITECAP, 2014)

Ingredients

- 3 cups (750 ml) chicken stock
- 2 tbsp (30 ml) extra virgin olive oil
- 1 tbsp (15 ml) butter
- 3 medium leeks, white and pale green parts thinly sliced, rinsed and drained
- 1/2 tsp (2.5 ml) salt
- 3 cloves garlic, minced
- 1 cup (250 ml) pearl barley
- 1/2 cup (125 ml) dry white wine
- 3/4 cup (185 ml) fresh or frozen peas
- 2 tbsp (30 ml) whipping cream
- Zest of 1 lemon
- 1/2 to 1 tbsp (7.5 to 15 ml) lemon juice
- 1/2 cup (125 ml) grated Parmesan, plus more for sprinkling

This recipe serves four as a side dish and two as a main. GWENDOLYN RICHARDS

Ribbons of carrots and a drizzle of lime dressing

"Using carrots in a variety of colours makes for a gorgeous salad, but the regular orange ones are just as tasty," writes author, food writer and blogger Gwendolyn Richards in her book Pucker.

"The pistachios add a great crunch, while the cranberries play up the carrots' sweetness.

"Even friends and family who don't like carrots say they enjoy this salad."

1. Peel the carrots and then, using the peeler, lightly shave off layers of carrot in ribbons. In a bowl, mix the carrots, avocado slices, pistachios and cranberries.

2. In a jar with a lid or in a bowl, combine the lime juice, sugar, salt and pepper to taste. Give it a couple of shakes, or whisk together, and then add the oil. Shake or whisk again until emulsified. Pour a few tablespoons over the salad and toss lightly to keep the avocado from getting too mushy. Add more dressing as needed.

Ingredients

- 1 lb (500 g) carrots
- 1 avocado, sliced
- 1/4 cup (60 ml) pistachios
- 1/4 cup (60 ml) dried cranberries

Dressing

- 2 tbsp (30 ml) lime juice
- 1 1/2 tsp (7.5 ml) sugar
- 3/4 tsp (4 ml) salt

- Freshly ground pepper
- 3 tbsp (45 ml) extra Virgin olive oil

This recipe serves two to four. GWENDOLYN RICHARDS

♉ Taurus

April 21 - May 21

Don't worry too much if you fall out with a friend today because it's really no big deal. It could even be beneficial in that you may need to clear the air.

♊ Gemini

May 22 - June 21

Winning may not be everything but it isn't nothing either. If you get the chance to be number one today, take it. Mars in the career area of your chart makes it easy to be assertive.

♋ Cancer

June 22 - July 23

You may be short of cash but you can still find ways to get what you want. If you can't satisfy your needs one way you will satisfy them another — and it won't cost you a cent.

♌ Leo

July 24 - Aug. 23

If someone annoys you today you won't hesitate to challenge them. The bad news is they could turn out to be a tougher nut to crack than you expected.

♍ Virgo

Aug. 24 - Sept. 23

There is tension in the air and partners and colleagues could be difficult to deal with over the next 24 hours. Don't overreact and say or do things that make matters worse. It'll pass.

♎ Libra

Sept. 24 - Oct. 23

You will have to do something you don't want to do today and most likely you will let everyone know — it isn't your idea of fun. Be professional.

♏ Scorpio

Oct. 24 - Nov. 22

You are in one of your assertive moods today. Just be careful you don't annoy someone whose cooperation you may need in the near future.

♐ Sagittarius

Nov. 23 - Dec. 21

Don't try too hard to keep your emotions bottled up because it will be better for your health if you let your feelings show. You also need to prove that you are not intimidated by people who throw their weight around.

♑ Capricorn

Dec. 22 - Jan. 20

Travel and social activities are well starred right now but don't stray too far in the wrong direction. It's one thing to be adventurous but quite another to be foolhardy.

♒ Aquarius

Jan. 21 - Feb. 19

Don't push yourself too hard over the next 24 hours. Some days were made for taking it easy and the planets indicate that this is one of them.

♓ Pisces

Feb. 20 - March 20

With Mars in your sign you refuse to accept second best. But as Mars squares up to limitations planet Saturn today recognize that authority figures need to be respected.
